LOCAL.
—Train three hours late.
—John Owens returned last night with a carload of horses.
—W. J. Burris, of Lacombe, is visiting in Edmonton this week.
—Major McGibbon, inspector of Indian agencies, is in town to-day.
—Mr. McDonald, trader of Pembina river, sold a lot of fur to-day for $1,000.
—Mrs. Silver, who has been visiting in Edmonton, returned this morning to Everett, Washington.
—Messrs. Sherman and McCutcheon, who arrived from Southern Manitoba a few days ago, leave to-day for Peace river to prospect and settle.
—Just before noon to-day a Galician named Jacob Hartman found the dead body of a small baby wrapped up in a pillow slip, over the bank of the river in front of block X. The police and the medical health officer have the case in charge.
—Anniversary services will be held at Clover Bar on March 8th. Rev. T. C. Buchanan, of Edmonton, will preach at 2 p. m., and Rev. Mr. Finch will preach at 7 p. m. The meeting will be held on the 9th, in the church, free will offering.

—The supreme court sittings were commenced in Edmonton yesterday. The only case that came up yesterday was the King vs. Hensel. Hensel was charged with interfering with the police in the performance of their duty and also with inflicting severe bodily injury on one of their number. He was sentenced to two months in jail with hard labor.

—The laying of the intake pipe for the waterworks system was completed yesterday. It is 189 feet in length. The first seventy feet were laid by building sectional dams out of which the water was pumped and the bottom dug out to the required depth. The other one hundred and ten feet of the pipe were lowered into the river after it was dredged to the necessary depth.

THE GREAT WHEAT BELT.

But while the marked feature of the drainage basin of the Red and Saskatchewan rivers is great and wonderful uniformity of fertility of soil, and while all parts are well within the northern limit of successful wheat culture, it would be a mistake to suppose that the conditions are the same, or are equally favorable throughout the whole area. As already indicated the country has an easterly slope from the base of the Rockies to the valleys of the Mississippi and Red Rivers. It has also, a northerly slope to the Arctic Ocean as shown by the course of the great Mackenzie river. But this northerly slope is intercepted by the valley of the North Saskatchewan which cuts clear across the plains from the Rockies in the west to the Laurentian in the east and bars the northern extension of the high, dry, plain country which occupies such a vast extent of the western part of the United States. The highest part of the great plains lies in the States of Colorado, Wyoming and Montana. Because of their great elevation above the sea the climate of these states is too dry for successful agriculture, and they are devoted almost entirely to grazing. In its western part the international boundary approximately follows the watershed between the Missouri and the South Saskatchewan. The Missouri finds its way south-easterly into the Mississippi and the South Branch northeasterly into the main Saskatchewan. The streams which rise in the Rockies unite to form the South Saskatchewan show a rapid fall of the country northward from the international boundary, so that while at the boundary line west of the 104th meridian the climate is as dry as the Canada as on the Montana side, the country falls so rapidly that at no very great distance, as the low lying lake and forest region bordering on the Laurentian formation to the east, or the Saskatchewan valley to the north is approached, the rain and snow fall becomes sufficient for profitable agriculture. Speaking roughly the southwestern portion of the Northwest Territories, which is drained by the streams which form the South Saskatchewan, is a modified continuation of the high dry grazing lands of Montana, but with naturally rich soil, a better growth of grass and a more general distribution of water. This is especially true of the foothill region. Further east in the drainage basin of the Red River, served by the Souris, the Qu'Appelle and the Assiniboine and further north in the drainage basin of the north Saskatchewan with its southern tributary the Battle river, there is a sufficiently assured rainfall to make the difference between a grazing and a wheat growing country. The wheat belt does not extend due west from the Red River to the Rocky Mountains, but northeasterly, taking the drainage basin of the Red River northerly and westerly and then the drainage basin of the Saskatchewan westerly and northerly to the base of the Rockies, and still further northerly and then westerly to the Peace River. It is bounded along its northeasterly side by the Laurentian region of lake, rock and forest and on its southeasterly side by the high dry grazing region of the Great Plains.

The slope of the country from the boundary line, northward along the Rockies is shown by the elevation above the sea of the several townships lying almost on a north and south line. Cardston near the boundary is 3,700 feet above the sea. Calgary on the Bow River, 150 miles north of the boundary is 3,410 feet, Edmonton, on the Saskatchewan, is 2,177 feet. The elevation of Edmonton is that of the country generally, while the river at that point is not more than 2,000 feet above the sea. Winnipeg, on the Red River is about 750 feet above the sea. The difference in elevation between Winnipeg and Edmonton, nearly one thousand miles northwesterly following the wheat belt, is 1,460 feet, while the difference between Edmonton in the wheat belt and Calgary in the grazing region only 200 miles further south, if the upland level is taken in both cases, is about the same.

The Saskatchewan river rises in the Rocky Mountains and after a northeasterly and then an easterly course empties into Lake Winnipeg near its northern end. The Red River empties into the southern end of the same lake, and the outlet of the lake is to Hudson's Bay by way of the Nelson river which is the only break through the Laurentian region already spoken of. The Saskatchewan is of course the great physical feature of the region which it drains, and in the old trading and hunting days gave its name to the country. Now, however, only the region along the lower part of its course is known as Saskatchewan, while that in which it takes its rise and flows through for the first three hundred miles is called Alberta. The division is no doubt made in recognition of the difference in climate between the western and eastern portion of the region because of the influence of the chinook. Alberta is the territory which extends along the base of the mountains from the international boundary north to the 55th parallel, and takes in all the sources of both the South and North Saskatchewan, and in the northern part those of the Athabasca as well. For convenience the northern half of the district is known as North Alberta, and the name is taken to mean the grain growing part of the chinook belt as distinguished from the grazing region of Southern Alberta, where the chinook is more pronounced. Of North Alberta the part covered by the actual drainage of the North Saskatchewan and served by the existing railway is commonly known as the Edmonton district, from the old Hudson's Bay trading post, and now the thriving town of that name on the Saskatchewan river, the northern terminus of the railway system of the continent. What is known as the Edmonton district extends from Ponoka, where the Calgary and Edmonton railway crosses the Battle river, seventy miles south of Edmonton, to the height of land between the Saskatchewan and Athabasca, fifty miles north of Edmonton, and as far east and west as settlement has gone. Within this area and particularly in the vicinity of the town of Edmonton, settlement has been established so long and has advanced, to such a degree that the advantages of the country are now fully demonstrated and may fairly be taken to show by comparison the capabilities of the surrounding regions according to their varying natural conditions.

At present and for a number of years past, the Edmonton district has attracted a very large share, if not the largest share of the incoming population. This is the more remarkable because it is the furthest northwesterly point which immigration can reach by rail. It therefore costs more in time and money to get there than to get to any other district of the Canadian West. Being farther from the eastern seaboard and from the commercial and manufacturing centres of the east, it is evident that supplies may be expected to cost more to bring in and produce more to take out than from any other section of the West. The preference shown for a district so situated can only be accounted for in one way, and that is by its superior natural advantages and resources, which more than balance the unfavorable features of its situation. It has all the advantages which belong to the eastern part of the wheat belt and many others which are peculiar to it.

Its deep, rich, black soil is as striking and universal a feature of the Edmonton district as it is of the Red River Valley itself. The black mould is from two to three feet deep on the high as well as on the low land, and indeed is frequently deepest on the tops of the gentle swells which pass for ridges or hills. The sub-soil is a yellowish clay, free from sand or gravel, and as capable of producing wheat as the black mould of the surface. Indeed it is an accepted fact that as the sub-soil is worked up amongst the mould the grade of the wheat grown on it is improved. On this richest of rich soil the growth of wild vegetation is of a variety and luxuriance that is of the tropics rather than of the temperate zone, and such as is seen no where else in the Territories, proving by the most incontestable evidence not only a rich soil but a favorable climate, and desirable conditions.

The rich growth of vegetation gives abundant and excellent natural pasturage for cattle, and the same growth ensures plenty of hay for winter feed at the bare cost of labor.

The growth of timber both small and large, which alternates with open prairie throughout the district not only gives a most attractive appearance to the country but is of the greatest utility at all seasons of the year. In summer cattle are sheltered from the heat and in spring and fall from storms. The fierce sweep of the winds of winter is prevented and fuel, fencing and building material for houses and outbuildings is ready to hand at only the cost of the settlers' own labor. In this one particular of abundance of timber for farm and household use the advantage is compared with the prairie, counterbalanced, all the disadvantages of extra cost of transportation by reason of distance north and west. The Edmonton district not only has milder winter weather, less wind and more wood for fuel, than other parts of the West, but it has coal in abundance as well. Coal is the ideal fuel for a northern winter; it is so easy to handle, and gives such a strong and steady heat, that wood does not bear comparison with it. The Edmonton district has more good coal immediately available than any other coal area in the known world. Of course it is not found everywhere, but it is found in so many places as to give good ground for the opinion that it actually underlies the whole district. It is chiefly worked where the seams show in the cut banks of the Saskatchewan river or some of its tributaries, but sometimes it is quite close to the surface on level ground and is mined as stone is quarried. The prevailing price at the pit mouth is $1.00 a ton, and the price delivered to customers in the town of Edmonton is $3.00 a ton. The coal is in such quantity over such a large area that there is no danger of the supply ever being cornered. Its quality is first class for domestic use. It is very easily lit and controlled, and is free from smoke. It is used for steam purposes as well, but is not of a good quality for blacksmithing. The seams occur at intervals as far east of Edmonton as Victoria on the Saskatchewan, 80 miles distant, and up the river to the mountains.

Besides the ordinary growth of timber throughout the district, there are considerable areas of spruce suitable for sawing. The largest of these are westward up the river and in the foothills of the Rockies. This timber is sawn by local mills and sold retail at about $18.00 per thousand feet. While the supply is not inexhaustible it is sufficient for many years and ensures building material to the settler at a moderate price. The ultimate supply of lumber for the great plains must come from across the mountains in British Columbia, as indeed a great part of it does now, but the local supply is at least a check on outside lumber prices.

With a gently undulating surface and a good growth of timber the district is naturally well watered with lakes, creeks and rivers, and good water is generally easily procurable by digging wells. Wood and water, hay and coal, a mild winter climate and a luxuriant summer growth, a country pleasant to the eye and unequalled as giving health and vigor to the human system. These are the advantages which have so largely attracted settlers to this far western portion of the "Great Wheat Belt."

SCHOOL BOARD

The regular meeting of the Edmonton Protestant public school board was held in the secretary's office Tuesday, March 3rd, at 8 p.m. Mr. Alex. Taylor occupied the chair.

The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted on motion of H. C. Taylor and H. A. Gray.

A communication was read from H. D. Johnson which was a copy of a letter to R. J. Manson re cement, floor being laid against his instructions. Another letter was read from Mr. Johnson asking 2 1/2 per cent on Manson's contract instead of $550. Mr. Spooner wrote the school board notifying them that the coal man had broken some windows in the basement of the school.

The chairman reported having seen Mr. Picard, of the separate school board, according to previous instructions re children attending our school. The chairman of the Roman Catholic school board proposed to throw open their school free to our children if we allowed their children to attend our schools free. On motion of Mr. McLeod and H. C. Taylor the chairman's report was adopted.

It was moved by H. C. Taylor, seconded by Mr. McLeod that the chairman and Mr. H. A. Gray be a committee to interview the local members of the legislative assembly upon the question of fees from the children of persons other than ratepayers attending our schools.—Carried.

It was moved by Mr. McLeod, seconded by Mr. Gray that the copy of H. D. Johnson's letter to R. J. Manson be filed and that his communication be referred to the table for further discussion.

Moved by Mr. McLeod, seconded by Mr. H. A. Gray that a proper coal chute be supplied for the new school and that Mr. Blatchford be billed with the cost of damage done to the basement windows of the new school, Carried.

On motion of H. C. Taylor, seconded by Mr. McLeod it was decided to give a bonus of $50 to Mr. H. D. Johnson.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid:

H. W. H. Douglas,	$350.23

The Great Stores of the Great West

WHAT WE DO WE DO RIGHT.

* * * *

WE ARE HEADQUARTERS FOR CHINA, GLASS, CROCKERY.

* * * *

OUR STOCK is probably the largest in Western Canada. OUR PATTERNS are the most attractive that modern pottery can produce. OUR PRICES are the very lowest at which standard goods can be sold.

FOR TEN DOLLARS

We can give a very attractive Dinner Set of 97 pieces. This is not the nameless, "cheap and nasty" kind usually offered at about this figure, but is high grade ware, every piece stamped with the name of Johnson Bros., one of the best English potteries, and the pattern is particularly neat and attractive.

OUR HIGHER PRICED GOODS

Are equally good values with the above. We have sets of from 97 to 129 pieces, bearing the impression of such potters as Copeland, Johnson, Ridgway, Minton, at $12.50, $13, $15, $16, $18.50, $20, $28.50, $30, $40.

IN CHINA

We have some of the choicest productions of French and English potteries, either in tea sets at from $6 to $20, or in separate pieces.

The favorite old Blue Willow pattern, cups, saucers, and plates, fine china, several shapes, two shades of blue, either singly or in sets.

IN GLASSWARE

We have tumblers from 50c a dozen up to genuine full flint cut at $4. We have a handsome cut tumbler at $2.75 a dozen. We have forty different lines of wine and whisky glasses.

Port Sherry, Champagne Glasses, cut flint, either plain or engraved, $1.50 to $6 a dozen. Decanters and Spirit Jugs, 60c to $6 each.

WE ARE THE WALL PAPER HOUSE OF THE WEST PERFECT PAPERS, PERFECTLY PUT ON.
